<sup>1</sup>This list necessarily does not include all of the technical abbreviations which have been or may be used in describing the material condition of books; but it will show the meaning of the more usual abbreviations to be found in book catalogues,—especially in those issued by booksellers. It includes twice the number of abbreviations published in the "Library of the Cornell University," vol. i., no. 1, 1873, and has been compiled from that list, from lists given in Ottino's "Manuale di bibliografia," 1885, Cousin's "De l'organisation et de l'administration des bibliothèques," 1882, Rouveyre's "Connaissances nécessaires à un bibliophile," 3e éd., 1882, and from other sources, including catalogues themselves.

<sup>2</sup>In English a book is said to be uncut when its edges have not been trimmed by the binder; the book may or may not have been cut open for reading, and yet be "uncut" in the technical sense of the term. In French and German a distinction is made between "uncut" as applied to those books which have not been trimmed by the binder, and those which have merely not been cut open for reading; in the former case they are said to be respectively "non rogné" and "unbeschnitten"; in the latter, "non coupé" and "unaufgeschnitten."
